Market Commentary

NZ bonds had a positive return for the month which was pleasing. This is the first reasonable move lower in NZ bond yields this year, mid curve bonds finished the month lower in yield, while short and longer maturity bonds were higher. In May it was important where you were invested along the yield curve as there was a noticeable difference in performance. The 1-year government bond finished 11 (basis points) bps higher, the 2-year 5 bps higher, the 5-year finished 9 bps lower, and the 10-year bond and 2051 government bond were 6 bps lower, and 16 bps higher in yield respectively. Where appropriate we have had an overweight positioning in mid-curve bonds around 5 years in maturity which has been helpful for returns.

From a sector perspective there was a variance in performance across maturities. Shorter maturity government bonds up to 7 years performed better than swaps. Conversely swaps longer than 10 years in maturity performed better than the same maturities of governments. It is better for our funds when swap outperforms government bonds. We generally hold fewer lower yielding government bonds and have more exposure (indirectly) to swap as our credit holdings are priced as a margin over the underlying swap rate. NZ credit margins were relatively stable as demand has continued to dominate pricing with a lack of supply in new issues and the secondary market. We have added some new bonds but remain very selective in what we buy and continue to sell bonds that look expensive in terms of credit margin. We remain cautious on fund positioning in terms of interest rate risk while a fair degree of uncertainty remains. High inflation, hawkish central bank rhetoric, and larger/faster rate increases have dominated the direction of interest rates this year. At the same time the prospect for bond returns may be improving. We can buy quality mid-curve bonds at yields around 5% which will likely perform reasonably well over the medium term. Over history flat or inverted yields curves have been viewed as a potential harbinger of slowing growth and although the cash rate will go higher in the near-term concerns over growth prospects are increasing and this will likely weigh on how high bond yields will go.

Fund Commentary

The fund had a positive monthly return due to a fall in yields for mid curve maturity bonds. Performance was in line with the Bloomberg NZ Corporate bond benchmark. Swap margins expansion relative to similar maturities of governments was unhelpful for returns as the fund generally holds few government bonds due to their lower yield and more credit which is priced as a margin above swap. The fund was positioned slightly longer than benchmark duration. The fund achieves a high yield from credit and holding inflation linked government bonds where appropriate which should benefit returns. A gradual recycle into new deals at higher levels is our plan. We also continue selling bonds that look expensive and switching into more defensive/liquid holdings
